WHY DO WE WANT TO SEE SCHOOLS BECOMING PLACES WHERE STUDENTS ARE COURAGEOUS ADVOCATES?

At the Church of England Foundation for Educational Leadership (CEFEL), we believe that ‘leaders in education are called to pursue social justice and wellbeing of all, showing love for the disadvantaged, marginalised and vulnerable’.¹ Indeed, church schools were set up originally for this very purpose back in 1811!

Courageous advocacy is the act of speaking up and advocating for a cause or issue that one believes in, even in the face of opposition or backlash. It requires a level of courage and conviction, as one is taking a stand and potentially putting oneself at risk in order to make a positive impact. Courageous advocates are willing to take a stand and speak out against injustice, even if it means facing personal or professional consequences. They are driven by a strong sense of purpose and a belief that their actions can make a difference.

We have a vision to support schools in providing spaces where students are able to become courageous advocates by:

- demonstrating WISDOM by upskilling staff with the evidence-informed knowledge to support these students as best they can (and signposting further in-depth training)
- building COMMUNITIES that collaborate to ensure flourishing for all – particularly the most vulnerable – through networking school leaders together
- seeing the innate DIGNITY in each and every child, thus seeking to understand them as best we can and prioritising their needs within our schools
- becoming beacons of HOPE so that ‘bad experiences need not have the last word’²

By partnering with the Courageous Advocacy Network, schools can help their students develop the knowledge, skills, and confidence to speak out against injustice, promote equality and human rights and work towards a more sustainable and equitable future.

Through expert webinar sessions, engagement and discussions, the Courageous Advocacy Network can help school leaders empower their students to become powerful agents of change, inspiring them to take action and positively impact their communities and beyond.

The structure of the network is as follows:

This network is not a course and does not replace the depth of knowledge and understanding that can be gained through expert training. It is an opportunity to engage in discussion, raise awareness and identify areas for development and gaps in knowledge.

One of the key benefits of this network is connecting schools with organisations with expertise in this field. They can offer their own programmes, resources and materials, which schools can access to deepen their knowledge of these topics in much greater depth.

Each network session will build on the learning from the expert instruction. Participants will be expected to engage with that learning, considering how to apply it to their own context. Key questions will encourage participants to try out/ explore a particular activity or strategy in their own school and report back at the next network session.

Intended Learning Outcomes:

- An improved understanding of what courageous advocacy is and how it benefits students/ young people in a range of different ways
- Increased understanding of the skills and values that enable students/ young people to speak up and take action for the causes and issues they care about
- For school or trust leaders to be taking steps to foster a culture of social justice and advocacy across a whole school or trust
- For practitioners to be utilising a range of strategies to support and empower students who have engaged in or are interested in courageous advocacy
- Evaluated and reviewed policies and procedures for promoting pupil voice and participation; identified and implemented actions to impact positively upon student wellbeing and outcomes
- School leaders feeling equipped to obtain appropriate external advice and support from a range of agencies and organisations (including those signposted by the network) that can help them develop their courageous advocacy initiatives

Ultimately, we want to see those students and young people in our schools who are engaged in some form of courageous advocacy to be more able to make a positive difference for themselves and others because they are informed, supported and inspired to act.

This is dependent on schools who are led and staffed by adults who demonstrate particular mindsets and, therefore, behaviours. Therefore, our network principles, which we are seeking to develop in participants (with the intention of effecting long-term change) are:

- A willingness to learn and admit any gaps in knowledge
- The courage to seek help and make difficult decisions
- Empathetic listening which seeks to understand
- Open-mindedness to different approaches and ideas
- Non-judgemental engagement with others
- Commitment to action in service of students/ young people
